

Partner of Dentons Hangzhou Office William Yang Gao Delivered A Seminar to International Students at the School of Law

“Why go abroad?” “How to go abroad?” “What Opportunities?” “What can we do?” These are the questions proposed by William Yang Gao, Partner of Dentons Hangzhou Office, at a seminar entitled “China’s Outbound Investment and Opportunities to Overseas Students” on 16 May 2019.

As an expert of International Investment and International trade, Mr. William Yang Gao currently holds the position on the Partner-in-Charge of International Legal Services at Dentons Hangzhou Office. Dentons Law Firm recently becomes the largest law firm in the world, with 170 offices and more than 10000 lawyers spreading in 70 countries to provide legal service for their clients. As the Partner of Dentons Hangzhou Office, William also serves as Deputy Director of International Investment Professional Committee at Hangzhou Lawyers’ Association.

Invited by the School of Law, on Wednesday afternoon William delivered a presentation to the international students of the Law School and shared his perspectives on the future career opportunities for the international law students in the area of professional services. By telling several interesting stories he confronted with during the past years when dealing with the international trade business and international investment projects for his Chinese clients abroad, William encouraged the international students to master Chinese language and to learn more domestic laws and practices as well the knowledge of Free Trade Agreements and other regional arrangements. He also emphasized the significance of the extensive network for a legal professional to help the international clients in an overseas market.

In a Q & A session after the presentation, students who attended the seminar had a discussion with William on the challenges they met when they study law in China. At the end of the seminar, representing the International Legal Services at Dentons Hangzhou Office, William welcomed the international law students from the School of Law to apply for the internship at Dentons Hangzhou Office. He said the International Legal Services at Dentons

Hangzhou Office is willing to open internship opportunities to the good international students from Zhejiang Gongshang Law School if the students can meet the criteria.

